ISSUES PRESENTED

(1) Does N.Y.S. Social Service Law Section 382 violate plaintiff minor's constitutional right to travel or to equal protection?

The District Court held in the negative.

(2) Do the plaintiffs have adequate remedies at law in the N.Y. State Courts?

The District Court held in the affirmative.

(3) May plaintiffs ignore State administrative remedies prior to bringing this action in federal court?

The District Court held in the negative.

STATEMENT OF CASE

The facts are not in dispute. Briefly, Hector Torres is a seven year old minor whose home is in Puerto Rico. Plaintiffs, the aunt and uncle of the child, accepted him into their home in Rochester, New York. In September of 1974, the plaintiffs applied to Defendant Reed's agency for public assistance for said child. The agency denied the application pursuant to the provision of N.Y. Social Service Law Section 382.1. Plaintiffs then requested a State fair hearing, which was scheduled for October 16, 1974; but before it could be held, the plaintiffs intentionally cancelled their request for state review.

Plaintiffs thereafter and on or about October 30, 1974 commenced this action in the U.S. District Court for the Western District seeking preliminary and injunctive relief, a judgment declaring N.Y. Social Service Law Section 382 unconstitutional, the convening of a three judge court. The plaintiffs further moved for a temporary restraining order.

Both defendant - appellees through their counsel opposed the relief requested above by the plaintiff - appellants.

On March 5, 1975, by written decision Hon. Harold P. Burke denied the relief requested by the plaintiffs and dismissed the action.

The plaintiffs appeal the decision of Judge Burke.

It should be noted that appellee James Reed is a local county Commissioner of Social Services. As such, he is obligated to follow the provisions of the N.Y. State Social Service Law. He has no legislative power. This action attacks the constitutionality of a State statute over which Reed has no jurisdiction or control. Appellee Reed views the statute as a rational support statute.

Appellee Reed has to apply the statute. Assuming, but not conceding, that plaintiffs Cordova should have public assistance for child Torres, they would not have been eligible for said assistance. A public assistance grant for a family of 6 (including child Torres) is approximately $520 per month. Mr. Cordova earns $520 per month after taxes. Appendix p. 19. His monthly income is therefore at least equal to and possibly greater than a monthly public assistance grant.

ARGUMENT

POINT I

N.Y.S. SOCIAL SERVICE LAW SECTION 382 IS A SUPPORT STATUTE FIXING RESPONSIBILITY FOR SUPPORT OF A MINOR OUT OF STATE CHILD.

Plaintiffs allege that because the statute deals with non resident minors, that the statute is solely a residency state, and therefore violative of the constitutional right to travel and of equal protection.

The clear intent of the statute is to assure care and maintenance and support of the minor until he is self-supporting. This responsibility is placed on the person bringing the child into the state.

The statute does not inhibit travel in any way and applies equally to all minor non-resident children whether from Puerto Rico or any other state.

The state statutes which were struck down in Shapiro v. Thompson 394 U.S. 618 and Gaddis v. Wyman 304 F. Supp. 717 affirmed 397 U.S. 49 were statutes specifically establishing one year residency requirements with the express intention of inhibiting travel into a state of people who would seek or need public assistance, and as a condition precedent to becoming eligible for assistance. Section 382 does not establish this requirement.

POINT II

THERE IS ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW IN THE N.Y.
STATE COURTS

Agency action can be reviewed by State Fair Hearing as provided in N.Y. Social Service Law Section 166 and 18 N.Y.C.R.R. Section 358.4.

The state hearing decision is subject to judicial review by the N.Y. State Courts in Article 78 Proceedings. N.Y.C.P.L.R. Section 7803.

The plaintiffs did request a State fair hearing but cancelled it.

N.Y. Civil Practice Law and Rules Article 30 Remedies and Pleading, specifically provides for the remedy of Declaratory Judgment (C.P.L.R. Section 3001). Pursuant to this section, there is a large volume of cases holding that state Courts can rule on the constitutionality of statutes and grant relief where no question of fact is involved. Plaintiffs can obtain a Declaratory judgment in N.Y. State Supreme Court as to the validity and constitutionality of Section 382 which deals with responsibility for support. (See statute and foot notes infra).

POINT III

PLAINTIFFS MUST EXHAUST STATE ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES

Plaintiffs allege they bring this action under 42 U.S.C. section 1983 because N.Y.S. Service Law 382 violates a civil right of the child. Since the statute establishes an obligation to support for the benefit of the minor child, plaintiffs seek to nullify the statute so as to cancel their obligation to support and gain public assistance for the child.

The basic issue here is: who is responsible for the support of this child? In this case, N.Y.S. Social Service Law Section 382 places the responsibility on the Cordovas. The Cordovas allege the public should support the child. They attempt, by this action, to transform the issue of support into a constitutional residency question, thereby seeking (a) to avoid and by-pass state administrative and judicial remedies, and (b) to obtain an order from federal courts directing appellees to pay public assistance to the child.

Under the circumstances the ruling in Eisen v. Eastman 421 F 2d 560, 569 (2d Cir. 1969) cert denied 400 U.S. 841 is valid and applicable, and was properly applied by Judge Burke.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the decision and judgment of Honorable Harold P. Burke should be affirmed and the action dismissed on the merits.

Respectfully submitted,

§ 3001. Declaratory judgment

123. Constitutional questions—Generally

The remedy of a declaratory judgment is available where a constitutional question is involved, and no question of fact is involved. New York Foreign Trade Zone Operators v. State Liquor Authority, 1941, 285 N.Y. 272, 34 N.E.2d 316. See, also, Dun & Bradstreet v. City of New York, 1938, 276 N.Y. 198, 11 N.E.2d 728; Persky v. O'Connell, 1946, 65 N.Y.S.2d 546.

Action for declaratory judgment constitutes an alternative remedy to article 78 proceeding for administrative review of constitutionality of government action. Rock Hill Sewerage Disposal Corp. v. Town of Thompson, 1966, 27 A.D.2d 626, 276 N.Y.S.2d 188.

Constitutional rights may be tested in a declaratory judgment action. Aerated Products Co. of Buffalo v. Godfrey, 1942, 263 A.D. 685, 35 N.Y.S.2d 124, reversed on other grounds 290 N.Y. 92, 48 N.E.2d 275.

An action for declaratory judgment is appropriate for determination of a constitutional issue, and jurisdiction of an action raising such a question should be entertained pursuant to the C.P.A. and R.C.P. National Psychological Ass'n for Psychoanalysis, Inc. v. University of State of N. Y., 1959, 18 Misc.2d 722, 188 N.Y.S.2d 151, affirmed 10 A.D.2d 688, 199 N.Y.S.2d 423, affirmed 8 N.Y.2d 197, 203 N.Y.S.2d 821, 168 N.E.2d 649, appeal dismissed 31 S.Ct. 601, 305 U.S. 298, 5 L.Ed.2d 688.
